

Creative Writing My Own Personal Chicken

Did you know that there are as many chickens in the world as there are people?!? The chicken population is almost out of control. The world has enough chickens to lay all the eggs and provide all the meat that humans can possibly ever use! What will we do with the rest? The government of each country has decided to issue one chicken to each person in the world. You will get your own personal chicken! Write a story about how you get your chicken, what you decide to use your chicken for - forget eggs and meat – think of something new! You need to give your chicken a name and describe its role in your personal life. Is your life better because of your personal chicken? Worse? Be creative! Also, give your story a title.

Possible ideas on how your chicken could be used:

- Alarm to wake you up in the morning
- Clean your room
- Bodyguard
- Worm finder for when you go fishing
- Food warmer (she could sit on your lunch till 'noon)
- Typewriter
- Your pet's chauffer.
- Back scratcher
- Anything you want - Use your imagination!

Story Requirements:

- Your story needs to be about 500 words long
- 12 pixel font size
- Ariel or Times New Roman font only
- The title of the story can be 16 font size, but no bigger!
- Illustrate your story!
